Introduction

The characteristics required by people living in a democratic society differ significantly from those required by people living under a totalitarian regime. Democracies need active, informed and responsible citizens who are willing and able to take responsibility for themselves, their communities and contribute to the political process. Therefore, the main justification for teaching Education for Democratic Citizenship derives from the very nature of democracy, as is our case in St. Lucia. In the context of the education system, Citizenship refers to an educational activity, which involves the process of helping people learn how to become active, informed and responsible citizens. In this case, it is referred to as "Citizenship Education" or "Education for Democratic Citizenship." Education for Democratic Citizenship encompasses all forms of education from informal education in the home, through youth work, to a more formal type of education provided in schools.

The ability and the desire for individuals to participate in a democracy are not innate, but have to be learnt. Although a certain amount of citizenship education may be picked up through ordinary experiences at home, or in the workplace; that can never in itself be sufficient to equip citizens for the kind of active roles which are necessary in our complex and diverse society. If our students are to become genuinely involved in public life and affairs, a more explicit approach to Education for Democratic Citizenship is required and not just an infusion into the Social Studies programme as currently exists in our education system. The required approach should include all students regardless of their ability or background and should not be limited only to schools but form an integral part of all education for students and should be encouraged throughout life.

What is Education for Democratic Citizenship?

- An educational activity to help students learn how to become active, informed and responsible citizens.
- It refers to the status of being a citizen and a member of a particular political community or state. It therefore educates students about their rights and responsibilities as defined in law such as the right to vote and the responsibility to pay taxes.
- It pays special attention to involvement in public life and affairs from voting in elections to standing for political office as well as developing interest in politics and current affairs.
- It extends beyond the rights and responsibilities outlined in laws and political involvement to general forms of acceptable behaviour.

Purpose of Education for Democratic Citizenship Curriculum

Education for Democratic Citizenship will benefit students by helping them develop self-confidence and successfully deal with significant life changes and challenges. It will offer them a voice in the life of their schools, their communities and in society at large. It enables them to make a positive contribution by developing the expertise and experiences needed to claim their rights and understand their responsibilities thus preparing them for the challenges and opportunities of adulthood and working life.

Education for Democratic Citizenship as part of our education system will also help students learn key skills such as problem solving, debating, writing and discussing controversial issues. It will help them develop the attitudes or dispositions necessary for productive citizens, equality, personal responsibility, honesty and a sense that one's action can make a difference in society.

If taught separately, Education for Democratic Citizenship would also bring direct benefits to the school and other educational organizations. For schools and other educational organizations it would help produce motivated and responsible learners who relate positively to each other, to staff and to the surrounding community. For our society, Education for Democratic Citizenship would help create active and responsible citizens who are willing to participate in the life of the nation, the wider world and encourage students to play their part in the democratic process.

Methodological Approach

The Education for Democratic Citizenship curriculum is framed by the theory of constructivism. The basic tenet of this theory is that students learn best when they construct their own knowledge, meaning that knowledge is gained through a process of active and hands on learning rather than merely receiving knowledge from the teacher. Learning should therefore center round the individual student. He/she should be the architect of his or her own learning and the teacher serves as the facilitator.

In order to successfully implement the curriculum the facilitator must recognize that many of the concepts and topics in the curriculum have no 'right' or 'wrong' answers. It is important that students develop their own conception or understanding of for example why citizens should vote or should not litter. It is only when such understanding has taken place that behavioural change will occur.

Classroom Practices and the Teacher as Facilitator

To effectively promote learning and the overall success of the programme the following practices should be employed by the facilitator:

Lessons should be:

1. Clear
2. Achievable
3. Performance related

Learning tasks should be framed in higher order cognitive skills such as:

- Predict
- Create
- Analyse
- Classify
- Construct
- Assess
- Propose a solution for...
- Suggest how....
- Speculate what would happen if....

Instructional techniques should include:

1. Problem-solving group work
2. Co-operative learning activities
3. Open-ended enquiry
4. Student dialogue(debates, planned discussions)
5. Experiential exercises
6. Challenging, higher-order questioning
7. Incorporation of ICT

Learning activities/tasks should:

1. Be student-centered
2. Be challenging
3. Be engaging
4. Encourage problem solving (suggestions, ideas for alternatives)
5. Allow opportunity for students' choice

Assessment and Reporting

Assessment is a critical component of the Education for Democratic Citizenship curriculum. Assessment is important for the following reasons:

- To evaluate the effectiveness of the curriculum
- To inform whether learning has taken place
- To inform teaching practices and determine the need for change and improvement

The over-arching goal of Education for Democratic Citizenship is to develop citizens who have a positive attitude towards their country. Assessment should monitor three components of character: knowledge, feelings and behaviour. As such the traditional means of assessment will not adequately measure whether outcomes have been achieved especially those related to values and attitudes. Facilitators need to employ alternative forms of assessment including:

- Journals
- Portfolios
- Checklists
- Case study
- Oral presentation
- Conferencing
- Reflection logs
- Role Play
- Rating scales
- Peer assessment
- Self-assessment
- Questionnaires

MODULE SIXTEEN:

Crime and Violence

Rationale:

Crime and violence continues to escalate among young persons. This module raises the awareness of students of juvenile delinquency, crime and violence. Students must be encouraged to be reflective citizens and should be taught to assess their own risk factors for delinquent, criminal and violent behaviour. They also must be taught to appreciate the far reaching and lasting impact of crime. This module arms them with information and skills to do so and guides them to becoming responsible citizens as it relates to criminal and violent activities.

Broad Outcomes:

On completion of this module students will:

1. Differentiate among delinquent behavior, crime and violence.
2. Assess their risk of involvement in delinquent, criminal and violent activities.

MODULE SEVENTEEN:

Living in a Diverse World

Rationale

We live in a very diverse world and today we are very much inter-dependent. We rely on different people from all over the world for the clothes we wear, the food we eat and the technology we use. Our daily lives are constantly affected by what people around the world are doing! Every single one of us must recognise that we are 'Global Citizens'. We can no longer just regard ourselves as St. Lucians and this notion must be instilled in young persons. As Global Citizens living in a diverse world, it is important that we consider the wider environment and think about how our actions impact others, both locally and globally and be willing to act if we feel that the world we live in is not what it should be.

Broad Outcomes

On completion of this module students will:
